

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Reflecting on the past six years of my studying in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature at Tunghai University, I have had so many unforgettable memories and experiences. Being an in-service student, mother with two kids, and full-time English teacher, I have constantly felt being worn out playing the three roles all at the same time. On my way to the final destination, I have gotten confused and felt like giving up so many times. However, thanks to the generous support and assistance of my family members and some other people, I finally saw through my graduate study. I would like to express my gratitude to all these individuals who have helped me so much and accompanied me to go through the bittersweet period in my lifetime.

First of all, my deepest appreciation goes to my thesis supervisor, Dr. Jung-Han Chen, for his patiently guiding and instructing me throughout my study. It is my greatest blessing that Dr. Chen agreed to take me in as his student after I had failed once in the writing of master's thesis. Dr. Chen's expertise in English learning motivation and rich experience in quantitative research gave me great assistance in my times of helplessness. It is Dr. Chen, who gave me courage to face what I dared not to face before, that is, numbers and statistics. Right from the very beginning throughout the completion of my thesis, Dr. Chen helped me not only with the design of the study but also with every single detail, including designing and revising the questionnaire items, running and analyzing the statistics, and repeatedly revising the writing of my thesis. His very, very patient instructions and pleasant personality are the key factors that helped me to see through the most difficult time of my study. Working with Dr. Chen is a precious and valuable experience, for he is such a perfectionist that I have learned to be more critical about the wording and logical organization of my thesis. I am truly obliged to Dr. Chen and, honestly, I would not have accomplished the challenging task without his constant encouragement and insightful suggestions.

In addition, I am also truly grateful to my thesis committee members, Dr. Jyu-Fang Yu in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature at Tunghai University and

Dr. Shanmao Chang in the Department of English at National Changhua University of Education. Their esteemed experience and expertise in foreign language teaching and research greatly facilitated my refining the design of my study and revising the draft of my thesis. I really appreciate their insightful and constructive advice to make my thesis more significant and comprehensive.

I also owe it a great deal to my beloved family that I gained the power to have the mission impossible completed eventually. Whenever I was annoyed by the trivial editing work, my husband, Ming-Li Chiu, always gave me timely assistance. His patience, tolerance, and support were always there to back me up and help me carry on. Without his understanding and assistance, getting my thesis completed would have been a castle in the air. Most of all, I want to share the honor with my two lovely kids, Andy and Kiki. I want to thank them for being so well-behaved and considerate that I can concentrate on my study. Naïve and lovely as they are, they want to make a trophy for me in honor of my perseverance throughout the whole process. Equally important, I'd like to share the honor with my dearest mom and brother, Marty. Their unfailing love and unconditional support helped me tremendously during my times of helplessness.

Finally, I would like to express my gratitude to my co-workers, graduate program classmates, and my dear friends. My colleagues in the English Department at National Taichung Industrial High School generously supported and assisted me throughout my graduate study. Their enthusiasm and efforts in raising vocational high school students' English learning motivation and their English proficiency greatly inspired me. My heartfelt gratitude also goes to a number of lovely and supportive classmates, including Cher Yin, Sandy Hsieh, Maxine Huang, Nerissa Chang, Patricia Tsai, and Claire Ho. I truly appreciate their standing by me and sharing all the laughter and tears throughout the graduate program. At last, I want to share the glorious moment with my friends, Lili Hsieh, May Chen, Sophia Su, Shin-Lay Wang, and Sumiaty Huang. I truly treasure their twenty years of friendships and companionships. With their moral support, I finally overcame all the difficulties, frustrations, and sleepless nights. Indeed, I did it.
